The Commerce Department reported that the index rose nearly across the board in May after a revised 0.6-percent decline in April and a revised 0.1-percent drop in March.

Although economists said Fri-day that it looked like a rebound was occurring, they cautioned that would be less than dramatic and that growth would still be far below the 4 percent anticipated by the Reagan administration.

The Commerce Department also reported Friday that the U.S. defi- cit in merchandise trade widened in May to $12.67 billion, the second highest ever, from $11.85 billion in RA is April. The May figure was the largcit last July.

U.S. Plans New Security Measures At Airports, Including More Searches

MONTREAL - The U.S. government, responding to the recent upsurge in hijacking and apparent airline sabotage, has announced new aviation security measures, including an expansion of the federal air marshal force, intensified searches of passengers and baggage and elimination of the popular curbside check-in service for travelers flying overseas.

Elizabeth H. Dole, the secretary of transportation, announced these and other security procedures Thursday at an emergency govern-ing council session of the International Civil Aviation Organization. Transportation ministers from Canada and Britain also attended the meeting and sought to underscore the urgency of concerted in-ternational action to deal with the latest incidents.

Marching Protestants Clash With Ulster Police

BELFAST - Police have clashed with Protestants who tried to march through a Roman Catho-lic town in Northern Ireland in defiance of a government ban.

More than 20 police were injured, seven persons were arrested and an unspecified number of reporters were assaulted late Thursday as members and supporters of Protestant marching bands set out on their annual parade through Castlewellan in County Down. The town is 95 percent Catholic. The government earlier had banned Protestant parades through Catholic areas, Irish nationalists in the Catholic minority bitterly re-sent the marches, which celebrate loyalty to Britain.

Protestants believe that the ban was issued because of pressure from the republic of Ireland, which is holding talks with Britain on possible reforms in Northern Ireland to end 15 years of civil unrest.

One of the more sensitive issues under discussion is a possible role for Dublin in running the province. Among the proposals are shared security operations, joint courts to try guerrillas and joint parliamentary sessions.

The Protestants have been wary of such changes, fearing that they could lead eventually to reunification with Ireland.

On Thursday, about 500 police officers in riot gear sealed off all roads to Castlewellan, a town of sharply on how to approach the 1.500 people. A police spokesman three-part negotiations on limiting said the show of strength was intended as a warning to Protestants who have threatened to defy the ban on marching.

STRASBOURG, France ing "a higher level of effort" for many years on the same kind of Sports ministers from 21 West European countries have adopted a binding international treaty to minimize future outbreaks of violence at soccer matches.

The convention, adopted Thursday, followed a series of incidents at Europe's soccer stadiums that culminated in a riot May 29 before the European Cup Final match in Brussels, between Liverpool and Juventus of Turin. Thirty-eight persons were killed, and the English team's supporters were lamed for most of the violence. Under the convention, soccer clubs and stadium owners would have to segregate rival spectators at matches and impose strict controls on ticket sales to prevent the inter-mingling of rival fans.

The sale of alcohol at stadiums would be restricted, and speciators would be forbidden to bring in any objects — such as club standards that could be used as weapons.

Joop van der Reijden, the Dutch sports minister, who presided over the meeting, said that the convention was adopted by 20 nations and that only Switzerland abstained.

Salvador Case Reportedly Reopened SAN SALVADOR (UPI) - New testimony has reportedly led to the reopening of the case against a former army officer in the murder of two American land-reform advisers more than four years ago.

Based on the testimony of an American couple and a Costa Rican, a criminal court judge, according to a court source Thursday, reopened the murder case of David Pearlman and Michael Hammer, American land-reform advisers, and Rodolfo Viera, a Salvadoran peasant leader. They were shot to death Jan. 3, 1981, in a hotel restaurant by National Guardemen.

Poland's Meat Prices to Rise Monday

WARSAW (Reuters) — Poland's government announced Friday its plans to increase meat prices on Monday despite widespread public opposition, including calls for a strike.

The date of the increases was announced on the state-run television system's evening news broadcast, along with an announcement that an increase in purchase prices paid to farmers would result in more food on the market.

Calls for a strike included a statement by activists of the outlawed Solidarity trade union in Warsaw's biggest industrial plants. It said: Preparations for a strike in response to meat price rises have been discussed and methods of swift communications have been agreed in case the strike action were to be prolonged."

VIENNA (Reuters) — The former Czechoslovek foreign minister. Jiri Hajek, has been placed under strict around-the-clock surveillance to prevent him meeting foreigners, emigré sources said Friday.

The sources said Mr. Hajek, foreign minister in the Prague Spring era under Alexander Dubcek, was being followed closely by the secret police to prevent him from meeting members of a French parliamentary delegation currently in Czechoslovakia.

They said that the authorities feared that Mr. Hajek, a former spokesman of the Charter 77 human rights movement, might try to put the case of his son Jan to the French delegation. Over the past three years, Jan Hajek has been barred from studying at Prague University and has not been allowed to accept invitations to study in Austria and Norway.

Denmark Dissents on EC Car Exhaust:

LUXEMBOURG (Reuters) - Denmark prevented the European Community from reaching unanimous agreement Friday on emission standards for automobiles, arguing that the proposals were too lenient. After a 21-hour session, the other nine member nations agreed on levels for toxic exhaust gases, diplomats said. The compromise proposed by the EC's Executive Commission proposes a combined maximum level of eight grams (.28 ounces) of nitrogen oxide, the most dangerous pollutant. and hydrocarbons for cars with medium-size engines.

Commission officials said that Denmark would be under strong pressure to compromise. Britain also agreed during talks to drop legal moves to block West Germany's proposal to grant fiscal incentives to buyers of "clean" cars, diplomats said. In another concession, the commission promised Greece that it would take emergency measures if pollution in Athens exceeded certain levels.

Israel Feels It's Doing What U.S. Wants

Washington Post Service
JERUSALEM — The Israeli overnment has been led to believe that the Reagan administration does not want Israel to release the more than 700 Arab prisoners it holds - who are central to the current TWA hijacking drama until Washington is assured of the safety of the airliner hostages, according to well-informed sources

Despite increasingly blunt public statements by Reagan admini tration officials that Israel should immediately release the prisoners, as demanded by the hijackers, officials in Jerusalem expressed confidence that Israel's position in the hijacking case reflected U.S. de-

Israeli stance was being coordinated closely with Washington.

"The Americans do not want to see any linkage between the hostages and the prisoners," a senior official declared.

[President Ronald Reagan, in Chicago to speak on his tax proposal, refused to comment Friday on a Washington Post article quoting a White House official as having said that the administration expected Israel to free the Lebanese prisoners without waiting to be asked.

[His national security affairs adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, said that there was "no fundamental change" in the hostage situation. "There are a lot of actions going on behind the scenes," he said. "They haven't congealed yet."]

If the Israeli understanding of U.S. intentions is correct, it would appear that the Reagan administra-tion had linked the American hostages and the Arab prisoners by signaling Israel to sit tight until the hostages' safety was guaranteed.

This might come through their transfer to the custody of a Western embassy in Beirut, or to Syria. Israeli television reported Thursday night that such an understand-

It is accepted that lie detector tests have some role in keeping secrets. The Central Intelligence Agency and National Security Agency routinely administer them to their employees, and to an extent that cannot be known the tests, or the threat of tests, may have prevented some spying. Polygraph testing, its proponents admit, is less than 100 percent reliable. Lie detectors detect not lies but stress. Skillful liars, presumably including some spies, can fool the machines. The results of the tests are not admissible in court.

The Cattle Show Begins

Has the 1988 presidential campaign already begun? Sad to say, there is evidence it has. The first votes are to be cast at the Republican county conventions in Michigan in January 1988. Already potential candidates are scouring Michigan for support. But the deadline is even earlier than it seems, for the 10,000 precinct delegates entitled to vote at the state's 83 county conventions are to be elected in the August 1986 primary. To get your name on the ballot as a candidate for precinct delegate, you have to file signatures with the clerk in June 1986 - less than a year from now.

This deadline transformed last weekend's Republican Midwest leadership conference in Grand Rapids, Michigan, into the first cattle show of the 1988 campaign. Trooping into the Amway Plaza, just across the river from the Gerald R. Ford Museum, were Vice President George Bush and Representative Jack Kemp, Senator Robert Dole and Former Governor Pierre du Pont of Delaware. We will spare you speculation about which candidate got the support of the Shiawassee County chairman and how many judgeship hopefuls attended a reception for another candidate. Long before we can even guess the challenges that will face the next president, the campaign has begun.

Must we add that this is preposterously early? We are sympathetic to any state that is ready to challenge Iowa's and New Hamp-shire's claims to be the first to vote for president, and Michigan certainly is larger and arguably more typical of the nation than the other two. We suppose a focus on Michigan will force candidates to take blood oaths to help the auto industry, but then Iowa requires them to swear never to order a grain embargo.

The greater defect here is giving the vote to people elected two years before a party's national convention. This is one of those absurd features of the old system of presidential politics that the Democrats were wise enough to get rid of and the Republicans should not revive. If Michigan Republicans want to outflank their copartisans in lows and New Hampshire, fine. Just let them begin their process in the same calendar year as the election, not two years before.

The Sabbath Decision

In striking down a Connecticut law that let any employee take off from work on his chosen Sabbath, the Supreme Court has drawn a useful line between yielding to the demands of religious interests and accommodating them. The decision gives hope that rulings like the approval of a city-sponsored Nativity display were momentary lapses from the rule of strict government neutrality on religious matters.

Connecticut's unusual law guaranteed every employee the right to designate a personal Sabbath. That forced employers to give them the day off, regardless of the effect on the business or on co-workers who did not invoke religious duty. The law was an innocent outgrowth of the Legislature's decision a decade ago to abolish Sunday closing laws. Understandably worried that devout Christians would be forced to work Sundays against their ill, and solicitous also of those who observe a different Sabbath, the Legislature let every employee make an individual choice of a guaranteed day of rest. But that forced some citizens to bend to others' religious demands.

The 8-to-1 decision to this effect is encouraging because the court recently showed signs of looking for more ways to "accommodate" religion. Connecticut and the Justice Department argued that the state law was just such an accommodation, but the court correctly saw it as a religious command. As Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote, "Government must guard against activity that impinges on religious free-dom, and must take pains not to compel people to act in the name of any religion.

A truer model of accommodation lies in the federal civil rights law, which calls on employers "to reasonably accommodate" employee Sabbath preferences if that can be done "without undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business." Americans do not always live up to their constitutional tradition of religious tolerance. They sometimes show insufficient regard for the religious sensibilities of others. But rigid laws like Connecticut's will not foster understanding, and they send the wrong message, of government partisanship. Neutrality best keeps faith with the Constitution.

Slender Hopes for Milan

The outlook for [the European Community summit meeting in Milan is worse than it looked after the Brussels summit in March. Optimism over reform has waned and a whole string of other topics will cut into a 10-cornered discussion of only a few hours. The need for progress has grown visibly since Brussels. From next year when the Iberians join, there will be 12 viewpoints to reconcile; and there is growing pressure from America on a number of fronts such as the Strategic Defense Initiative and the threat of a food-dumping war. The acid test of the will to European unification remains majority voting. It entails the partial surrender of that national sovereignty which, in capitals like London, seems to gain in importance as its reality in the world of the superpowers shrivels before our eyes. In Milan, then, blessed are they who expect nothing for they shall not be disappointed. Hope, however, is free as usual.

Desperation in El Salvador

The terroristic machine-gun attack by guer-rillas that left 13 people dead — six of them Americans — at an outdoor San Salvador cafe is a savage act of desperation, more evidence that the leftist rebels are impatient with the lack of progress in their campaign to take over the country. Spraying gunfire into a crowd is not likely to win hearts or minds; it does inspire fear. Whether the terror was aimed at the American victims we cannot say. What is clear is that the world must not grow used to this terror. The terror must end, but never on the terrorists' terms.

1910: A Platform for U.S. Democrats LONDON - Thomas F. Ryan, New York financier, arrived here [on June 28]. To a Herald correspondent, Mr. Ryan said: "Business in the United States is good and if the politicians will let it alone the country will take care of itself. The Republican Party is breaking up. Were it not for Mr. [Theodore] Roosevelt's popularity with the masses the Democrats could elect a President in 1912. What would the issues be of the Democrats? First, stop making business subservient to political ambition; adjust the tariff in the interest of and for the benefit of all the American people instead of for a comparatively small number; rigid economy in the expenditures of the Government; upbuilding of the navy till it is superior to those of any two nations put together."

As Mr. Owsley's car, escorted by cavalry, approached the entrance to the castle at Cork Hill here, a group of Reds tried to rush it in order to shower the American envoy with leaflets demanding the release of Tom Moonev, the veteran labor leader imprisoned in California. While Mr. Owsley, former Minister to Romania, proceeded through the streets, other Communists passed among the crowds and distributed leaflets headed: "No welcome to Mr. Owsley! Release Tom Mooney!"

A Cornered Europe Shows a Will to Survive

PARIS — After a decade of dol-drums, members of the European Community are worried enough about their future to seek new momentum. Aiready, though, high expectations for this weekend's summit meeting in Milan have sagged. There is not much chance yet of rewriting the Treaty of Rome into a much tighter charter for a real Enropean Union, as has been discussed for so long. More modest moves are likely to try to overcome the many remaining barriers to internal trade and to restrain the egotism of states. Still, there has been a change in the wind. For the first time in years, the issue among the leaders is not about extracting money from each other but about how to develop the great potential that Europe has but cannot pull itself together to use.

And for the first time, they will be a round dozen. Portugal and Spain do not become members until Jan. 1, but they will attend as observers. The Community is reaching its full proportions, 320 million people, more than the United States or the Soviet Union. The prospect is reviving almost-forgotten hopes of creat-ing a vital new world power.

By Flora Lewis

No one denies that the impetus is fear. It is the fear of proud nations, once masters of global empires, that they will be left behind to stagnate and founder in a fast-moving world. The danger of irreversible decline such as others have faced in history is seen looming ahead. For the Europeans, the spur is not the clanking, armor-plated Soviet Union. It is the innovative United States, hard-selling Japan, the busily productive countries that have moved from underdeveloped to highly competitive in a genera-tion. The fear is of missing the third Industrial Revolution. President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative focused minds in a way he never intended and no one hope their Eureka project will mobi-lize Europeans for their own indusforesaw. It seems to foreshadow a vast new technological spurt to overtura economies. European interest in it is not about shooting down missiles, but about penetrating markets, saving jobs, keeping scientists. Whether they admit it or not, the French trial purposes. Four big companies from four countries have just agreed to join in it.

There is a long way for them to go, and they are coming to realize that that is precisely because they have failed to complete their Common Market An American hightechnology expert points out that European companies make 10 different types of telecommunications switches and spend a quarter of wheir programmers' time on it, when only two or three switches and less than half the time in a combined effort would mean profitability.

These facts of modern life inevitably collide with national politics, still chugging along at the old pace. The political tendency has been to look inward, to hold on to the bird in the hand and let those in the bush go their own way. A clear sign of the opposing tugs has come with the formation of the "Action Committee for Europe." It is a deliberate repetition of the committee established by the late Jean Monnet, who used it as a weapon to lobby, chivy and shove the Europeans into creating the EC.

The nostalgia is redolent. Some of the people are the same. The secretary is Max Kohnstamm, the venerable Dutchman who was a loval Monnet aide. The formula is the same: leaders of labor, business and politics who are ready to use their influence behind scenes to move governments. They met in Bonn earlier this month and issued an appeal to the Milan summit con-munity strength and confidence in its future. This is important. It creates a constituency for hard decisions. It is also revealing that businessmen and labor officials are much more strongly represented on the com-mittee than politicians.

These are the first signs that Euference "to give back to the Com-rope is producing the will to pick itself up again, as it did after the war. The difficulties also show how hard it is for nations, even friendly ones, to cooperate for joint benefit. But they can when it is painfully clear that there is no other way. The future depends on seeing clearly before there is too much pain.

Terror, Live at 5: Are the Media Part of the Problem?

A Want, a Need, to Know

T EWSPAPERS face a difficult task in dealing N with events such as the hijacking of TWA Flight 847. The terrorists' goals include publicity for their causes and demands, but by their actions they are also making news, and people grab eagerly for details. Newspapers have had calls from read-ers who cannot wait for the next day's paper; other people keep their radios on all night.

The enormity of the deed has commandeered

the public's attention; how could the media turn off the cameras, put away the microphones and tell reporters to step aside and wait patiently until the final act is over? The question answers itself. We want to continue reading about what is happening, what is being done to bring the hos-tages' release. We want most of all to read that they are safe and ready to resume useful lives. Then we will want to know what is being done to the perpetrators, what is being done to prevent a repetition. But a blackout now, while it would turn off the klieg lights shining on the terrorists, would also deprive us of information about the welfare of the bostages, and this we need to know.

- Sam Zagoria, Washington Post ombudsman.

Distant, Useless Knowledge

MARSHALL McLUHAN observed that primitive peoples may be better equipped for the communications revolution than highly intellectual peoples. C.S. Lewis, who somehow was both highly intellectual and stubbornly primitive, refused to read newspapers. He was convinced that they unnaturally and banefully engage our sympathies on behalf of remote people we can do nothing to help. We were given the power of compassion in order to help our neighbors, he contended, and only frustrated our better selves by getting worked up over the fates of strangers beyond our power to assist. Lewis had a point. Why should so many of us be hanging on the TV for the latest interim report on a few dozen people we can't do anything for? Who benefits from this monstrous maldistribution of attention except the criminals?

Two Edges to the Sword

— Syndicated columnist Joseph Sobran.

TOW FAR should media self-discipline go? In Should the press play censor at the source, and if so when? Should television blot out Nabih Berri's news conferences, or conceal the anguish of the hostages' families? Certainly Vietnam and Wa-tergate discredited the assumption that govern-ment knows what it is doing and would do it well if only the press kept its big nose out of it. True, television is about as capable of selfdiscipline in its chase after good footage as a dog is in chasing a rabbit. True also, television changes the terms of political action and discussion. It has helped arm puny mini-states and terrorist rings with the capacity to disrupt the composure and injure the pride of great powers. But this nuisance capacity can be turned into a fundamental threat only by inflated talk, panic and overreaction.

Ithiel de Sola Pool of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has observed that every new communications technology has aroused the censorial instinct. But deference to the censors' fears is

The Reagan administration has promoted a good deal of grumbling over TV coverage of the hostage crisis. But its "Mephistophelean bargain" with the tube (in Godfrey Hodgson's term) has been the most eager in our history. An administra-tion with so much faith in going, via television, over the heads of government and media middle-men to "the people" can hardly complain when the monster it usually strokes develops a bite.

- Syndicated columnist Edwin M. Yoder Jr.

For Greater Self-Restraint

WHY DO the networks cover terrorism the way they do? Largely for commercial reasons. Their coverage is driven by ratings, not news nent. Television executives understand that the public responds to the underlying tensions of hostage situations, but the situations themselves are fairly static after the first few days. Accordingly, there are few dramatic developments to tape and put on the air. So the networks try to expand the news to fill the excessive time allotted. The need to fill air time has several unfortunate effects. It tends to exaggerate the importance of an event. And it may encourage dwelling on historical analogies that may be mainly false, such as the comparison being drawn between the current situation and the Iranian hostage crisis.

Excessive and distorted coverage can frustrate policy-makers and limit their options. There was no good reason to allow Nabih Berri to appear regularly on network television, communicating his demands himself to the American public. The U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, Reginald Bartholomew, has had a particularly close relationship to Mr. Berri and could have negotiated with him in

By Pranay Gupte

But there is no imperative in terrorism that dictates the kind and amount of television coverage it gets. What would more responsible coverage look like? It would require a sense of perspective. It would be less extensive and repetitive and would give less air time to the terrorists themselves. It would also avoid interviews with so-called experts who second-guess the government and with family members who sometimes blurt out information that endangers their captive relatives. — Stephen Klaidman, a senior research fellow at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University, writing in The New York Times.

The chances of a recession occurring in the near future have risen

In a new downturn, America would face a Catch-22 situation.

sharply. For the last year, the unemployment rate (now 7.3 percent) has been virtually motionless, and in September the current recovery will be 33 months old — the average duration of all recoveries since the end of World War II. Already a slowdown in the first half of 1985 has led most economic forecasters to reduce estimates of future growth. No matter how the budget-cutting and tax-reform debates are resolved neither will be of much help in deal-ing with a stalled economy. Indeed, in the short run both factors could hurt. Cutting a deficit draws money out of circulation; doing it when economic growth is slowing down could be a recipe for recession. The uncertainty caused by a long debate over tax-code revisions, coupled with the certainty that any significant reform will depress some sectors (such as housing), will also tend to dampen short-term economic growth. If a downturn does begin soon, the United States will be caught in a Catch-22 situation. Since World War II. Americans have been able to spend their way out of recessions -including the last one — by increasing the deficit and lowering interest rates. But the high and persistent deficits of recent years have frightened the public, the press and most politi-cians into making deficit reduction the No. 1 economic policy goal. And the Federal Reserve Board insists on reducing the deficit before it will further lower interest rates. Slower growth, which also slows tax revenues, is already creating a larger deficit. The growth in the gross national product for 1985 now pre-dicted by top forecasters will add about $20 billion extra to the government's debt. To prevent the economy from tumbling into recession, interes rates will have to be lowered in the face of still higher deficits, or deficits will have to be deliberately increased further in order to put growing num-bers of the jobless back to work. The difficulty is compounded by mushrooming trade problems. Singlast summer, industrial production has been stagnant while imports have siphoned off the market for goods. Despite the fall in interest rates, the dollar remains strong. And hopes that the United States could arrest the erosion in its trade position by persuading Japan to open its markets to baseball bats and telecommunications equipment have proved naive.

Reaganomics has no answer for the trade delicit. Neither do the Demôcrats, who last year abandoned some promising industrial-policy propos-als to help capital and labor become more competitive.

Finally, the banking system still totters. Debtor countries and their creditors averted disaster this year primarily by raising exports to the United States. But the trade balances of some of the largest - Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela and others — are shrinking again. An economic downturn in America could wipe out those margins and plunge some of the most vulnerable debtor nations and the world financial structure into chaos. It could also wipe out a third of American savings and loan associ-ations, which are technically bankrupt or very close to bankruptcy.

The deficit, the erosion of the U.S. trade balance, and the fragility of the banking system are all fundamental problems of economic management to which neither traditional liberals nor conservatives have satisfactory answers. Nor is the public being pre-pared for dramatic, perhaps Dracontan, measures that may be necessary when the next crisis hits.

Laissez-faire rhetoric notwithstanding, bank bailouts show that Washington will expand its econopy intervention when major institutes are threatened. Yet policy-makers are neither developing alternative strate-gies nor addressing the constitution-al, social and political issues that further interventions would raise.
While Mr. Reagan and the Democrais squabble over taxes and defi-cits, few leaders seem concerned with the larger issue of new growth.

The writer is president of the Eco-nomic Policy Institute, a research of-ganization, and co-author (with Gar Alperovitz) of "Rebuilding America". He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

Regarding "Greece Reasserts Plan to Close Bases" (June 24):

Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou has triumphantly announced to the Greek parliament that he will close all American bases in his country at the end of their lease in 1988. In view of this and of Greece's return to Beirut of an associate of the hijackers of the TWA airliner, I suggest that the American government should announce now that as soon as practicable it will close these bases. Such swift action might cause the Greek government to modify its anti-

Odd Couple in Asia: Sihanouk and Kim Il Sung

By John F. Burns New York Times Service PYONGYANG, North Korea As Prince Norodom Sihanouk tells it, his friend came to him one day and said, "You've lost a coun-try, the least we can do is to build

you a house."
The friend was Kim II Sung, one of the most forbidding figures in the Communist world, and the house he built for the prince on a wooded hillside outside the North Korean capital was fit for a king. The prince, king of Cambodia as a teen-ager, and later prime minister and constitutional head of state, tells visitors that the 40room mansion in this austere workers' state is the grandest resiience he has ever had

"I call it my palace," he says, breaking into the nervous laugh-ter that punctuates much of his

On the face of it, the politics of this region has produced few od-der couples than the prince, 63, and Mr. Kim, 72, his benefactor. Prince Sibanouk is a gentle-mannered aristocrat with a pas-sion for French civilization. He is Buddhist who says of the Khmer Rouge, murderers of five of his children and 14 grandchildren, "I have to pardon,"

After 15 years under house ar-rest in Cambodia or in exile, either here or in Beijing, he remains an aesthete, immaculate in Paristailored pin stripes, partial to caviar and Champagne.

In addition to the mansion, Mr. Kim has provided 100 Koreans to staff it, and a fleet of huxury cars are at the prince's call. There are also hefty hard-currency expenses to be met for the prince's frequent overseas travels and even for his clothes. "It was not France which gave me this suit," the prince says.
"It was President Kim."

Then there are the lesser favors the imported wines and foods, the sports hall near the artificial lake where the prince plays badminton with Pyongyang-based diplomats, the dances for the diplomatic corps at which the prince, manning the stereo, favors American

Mr. Kim, whom the prince re-fers to as "more than a friend, more than a brother," is a man who has rarely been called that outside the Communist world.

A peasant's son who took power when the Soviet Army arrived here in 1945, Mr. Kim, through his Korean Workers' Party, has imposed a chilling regimentation on his country's 18 million people. He has bolstered it with a personality cult that many believe even Stalin could not rival.

The "glorious and beloved leader," one of Mr. Kim's many titles, has been for 40 years a bitter enemy of much that Prince Sihanouk admires, including the United States.

The two men first met in 1965 at a gathering in Bandung, Indo-nesia, to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the movement professing nonalignment. Prince Sihanouk recalls how President Sukarno, the host, placed the two leaders in adjoining suites in his palace and told them: "You are both nice men. I want you to be friends." In 1970, Prince Sihanouk was deposed as ruler of Cambodia by pro-American generals who resented his neutralism during the Vietnam War. He later took up residence in Beijing.

Mr. Kim proposed that he make an additional home for himself in Pyongyang. In 1974, the North Korean leader built the mansion in the Jang Su Won hills north of the capital, a few miles beyond Mr. Kim's own headquarters. Since then, the prince and his wife, Princess Monique, have lived in the mansion for a few months each year, except from 1976 to 1979 when the Khmer Rouge placed them under house

The differences between the exiled prince and his host are reflected in the architecture. When Mr. Kim asked what kind of place he would like, the prince specified something restful, beside water.

The Khmer Rouge, with China's backing, is the strongest element in the alliance. This places the prince in harness with men who locked him up in his own palace, slaughtered part of his family and, he believes, killed "about two million" Cambodi-

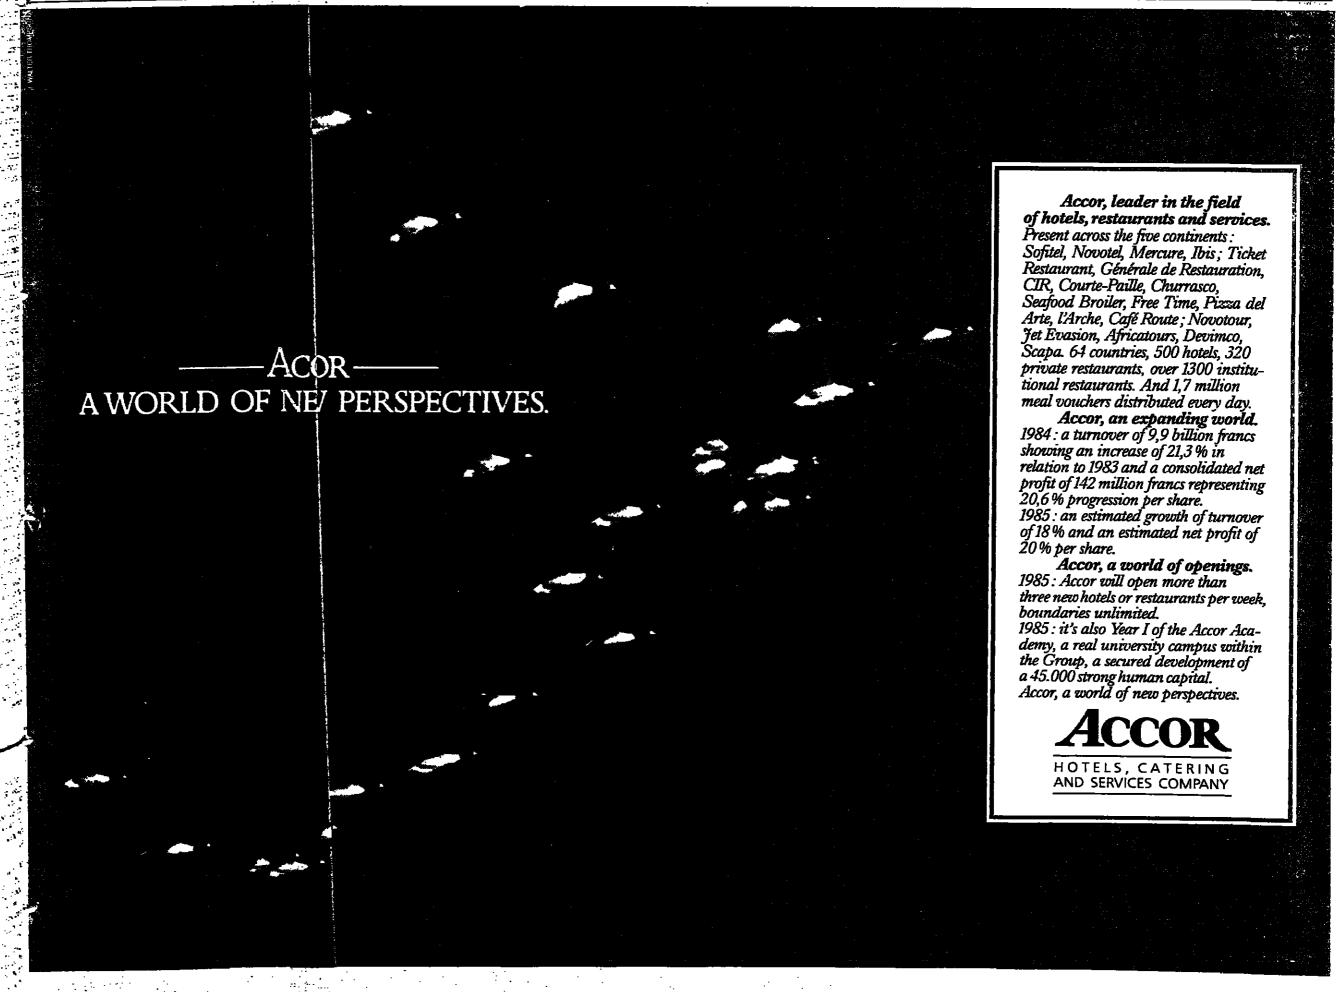

It is an association that dis-turbs many old friends of the prince, and one that is not easy for Mr. Kim to accept, either Habitually careful to balance his ties with Moscow and Beijing, the North Korean leader has been squarely on Beijing's side on the Cambodian issue. Lately, he has shown signs of edging away from the Khmer Rouge, but according to the prince, Mr. Kim has never tried to influence him politically.

Why, then, does the Korean leader make such extravagant efforts on the prince's behalf?

Diplomats here say they believe that Mr. Kim may have been influenced by a desire to increase his prestige in the non-Commu-nist world, but the prince says this underestimates his host's generos-ity. Similarly, he denies that the reason he has been spending more time lately in Pyongyang than Beijing, where he has another mansion, is because he resents the inflexible Chinese commitment to the Khmer Rouge.

The real reason, he says, is that the environment in Pyongyang is quieter, more conducive to writing his memoirs and to guarding his health. But an outsider walking through the eery midday quiet of the mansion wonders privately how happy he can be in this remote place, linked to the more sophisticated world he cherishes by the shortwave broadcasts of the BBC and the Voice of Ameri-

As though sensing his visitor's thoughts, the prince says: "To understand Sihanouk, you have to know that I am an Asian man. I am a yellow man, not a white man. So I am guided by sentimental feelings, by feelings of gratitude, and it is those that are most important to me. I will always be grateful to my hosts here, and in China, for giving me everything when everything was lost."

Cartouches of the text are inserted within the image. The proportions were worked out in relationship to the other side of the double page and to the general layout of the manuscript, creating a balance that has now been destroyed.

The cardboard mounts that frame the page, as they do all the other miniatures, reduce the width of the gold-specked margins. It is not necessary to be a specialist to be disturbed by this distortion or dazzled, despite everything, by the calligraphic outlines and by the dancing rhythm of the figures.

While no other manuscript in the Geneva show, and very few elsewhere, can match this, the exhibition does include one other book of considerable importance, last seen in the 1931 Exhibition of Persian Art in London. It contains part of a "Universal History" written by the Vizier Rashid ad Din and copied and illuminated at Tabriz in the early 14th century. The horizontal atures combine the monumental figures inherited from a tradition that goes back to pre-Islamic fresco painting, with the first at-tempts at introducing landscape el-

It belonged to the Royal Asiatic Society of London until July 1980, when it was bought at Sotheby's by a Geneva collector.

This is also the first time that a few marvelous miniatures from Turkey and Islamic India have been exhibited. One is a beautiful figure of an angel, done in Istanbul in the manner of the Iranian paint-The greatest represents King Keyoers from Tabriz who worked in the mars seated in the heart of the Ottoman royal atclier. What is perhaps the greatest poris writing a letter with four lines of "Master Dust, portraitist," appears at the bottom, telling us that it was painted by the famous calligrapher who also signed one of the minia-tures in the Book of Kings.

Another major work is a miniature by the Iranian artist from Shiraz, Abd os-Samad, who moved to India in about the same period. A Persian inscription of rare autobiographical content, not mentioned in the catalog, gives it extraordinary historic importance: "At the age of 75 when my pen had stopped working and my side had reached an extreme of weakness, this was sent as a keepsake . . . to my el-

More revelations are to be found among the objets d'art. The signature of two silver inlaid figures of galloping horsemen, and the provenance of the object — from the Kabul market in Afghanistan, which includes half the historical province of Khorasan — leave no doubt that it comes from there. The caskets, equally typical of Khora-san in every aspect of style and technique, are attributed to "Pun-jab or Hindustan," which is unlikely; we know nothing about metalwork in India at that time. A ewer with cylindrical body on three legs, typical of eighth-century Iran, is characterized as "Egypt . . . 9th, 10th century." A bronze door knocker, acquired in southern Iran with a Persian signature that the cataloger could not fully read, is not from "Iraq, Iran or Eastern Anatolia" but obviously from southern Iran.

Many other mistakes have slipped into the catalog. They are perhaps the inevitable consequence of the haste with which the exhibition was put together. The correceven more the imbalance from which the exhibition suffers: While cludes a large proportion of Iranian works. The share of Iran in the

Another regrettable result is the extreme contrast between the splendor of some pieces and the mediocrity of others. Given the disproportionate share of Iran, there was no need for two figurative bowls from Neyshabur that are as ugly as they are poorly preserved. In addition, one or two works call forth serious reservations concerning their dating and anthenticity. This does not prevent the Muste Rath exhibition from being a sensation for its abundance of new material and for some of its masterpieces. It is a great exhibition, one of the few major shows of interna-tional significance to be staged in Geneva since World War II.

Indian 'Living Arts' a Delight

By John Russell

WASHINGTON — Autus
The Living Arts of India" at the National Museum of Natural History came to this visitor as a delightful surprise. "Ăditi" is ât once an exhibition of high-grade Indian painting and sculpture and a living evocation of Indian village life. Orchestras strike up. Dancers dance. Child acrobats turn themselves inside out. Puppets act out their stories. Jewelers, carvers, weavers, toymakers go about their business. Almost life-size mock horses canter to and fro, and a licensed saboteur or resident clown is encouraged to bring chaos wherever there is order. All this has been concerted, directed and designed by a young Indian designer, Rajeev Sethi. How far what we see in "Aditi" duplicates what can be seen in any iven Indian village is a matter for discussion. The important thing is that Sethi has a rare gift not only for presentation but for the handling of the living human beings who make the show such a delight There is no regimentation, no schedule, no set program. ASHINGTON — "Aditi: they do. If they don't, no one the Living Arts of India" at scolds. They do not look exiled, boxed in or put upon.

They are very furny, too, with boisterous and unfeigned high spirits that visitors clearly find conta-gious. Doubtless it helps that many of them perform great feats of skill and agility and that the craftsmen are very good at what they do. Indians have an inborn distinction that is heightened when they are doing something that is rooted in the Indian past and has been brought down to us intact. But their activity has to be concerted. They have to have enough space not to fall over one another. We must never know what to expect next. There must be noisy places, but there must be quiet places, too. All this calls not only for stage-management of a high order but for delicate insights into human nature. Sethi excels in both these respects, and "Aditi" gives visitors a wonderful time. (The level of sales at the gift shop would alone be proof of that.)

"Aditi can be seen through July

A Sampling of London's 250 Exhibitions

By Max Wykes-Joyce LONDON — A sampling of some of the 250 exhibitions

currently in London: At the Odette Gilbert Gallery is the first one-man show of Alfred Whiteley, 57, who until two years ago was an art teacher in a school. His work is of a genre beloved by the English: literary painting, elegantly portraying a complex dream world, without the fripperies of Surrealism, where "Pandora's Box" is a case full of tropical butterflies and where in "The Painted Ceiling" a mother watches over her sleeping child while two men construct a golden calf. This is a remarkable debut by a visionary art-

At the Hayward Gallery, the Arts Council invited the historian and dealer Nigel Greenwood to se-lect this year's "Hayward Annual," which attempts to display major developments in contemporary British art. Instead of the usual catalog, the council has allowed Greenwood to produce an essay explaining his choices, accompanied by two folders of color repro-ductions. Too many of his choices are dreary oldsters like Francis Bacon, the knockabout comics Gilbert & George, and Henry Moore, but among the young he has lighted upon winners in the sculptor Nicola Hicks (b. 1960), the draftsman Julian Grater (b. 1959) and the col-

The 40 drawings include a page of studies by Theodore Gericault (1791-1824), a watercolor illustrating a La Fontaine fable by Honore Daumier (1808-1879); the "Pont du Carrousel" by Henri-Joseph Harpignies (1819-1916); a theatrical evocation, "Le Protecteur dans les Coulisses" ("Sugar Daddy in the Wings"), by Jean-Louis Forain (1852-1931); and a splendid chalk drawing of "Two Cats" by Théo-phile Alexandre Steinlen (1859-1923).

further into record territory Friday with the Dow Jones industrial average closing at an all-time high of 1,335.46. Trading was moderate through much of the day but quickened at the end of the session.

The Dow finished with a modest gain of 3.25.
Advances outpaced declines 910-683 among the 2,000 issues traded.

Volume decreased to 105.24 million shares from 106.73 million Thursday. Before the market opened, the Commerce Department reported the U.S. index of leading economic indicators rose 0.7 percent in May and that the U.S. trade deficit widened to The 0.7-percent rise in the index of leading economic indicators was weaker than economists had expected. Combined with a larger-than-anticipated drop in M-I money supply reported by the Federal Reserve after the market closed Thursday and the growing trade deficit, the data presented an argument for further interest rate declines, analysts said. But George Kegler of A. Webster Dougherty & Co., of Philadelphia, said the economic signals are mixed. He said it will take time for recent interest-rate declines to stimulate the economy and that the Fed is patient enough to wait to see what those declines produce before it moves to ease credit again. "Both the capital and equity markets will be in a volatile trading range for all of July," Mr.

Kegler said. Hildegard Zagorski of Prudential-Bache agreed. "This market's not really going to go anywhere," she said. "It's still in a trading range and could drift lower as second-quarter earn-

American Medical International was the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange, up ¼ to 26.

American Hospital Supply followed, up 1% to 41. Baxter Travenol said it would sweeten its $3.6-billion bid for American Hospital Supply. Baxter Travenol was up ¼ to 15%.

AT&T was third, up % to 24%. AT&T won a contract valued at close to $1 billion to supply minicomputers to the National Security Agen-

Federal National Mortgage Association, sen-sitive to interest rate movements, added % to 20% on lower rates in the U.S. bond market.

CBS gained 11/4 to 1161/4. The New York State Assembly voted 146-2 late Thursday in favor of a bill that would make it more difficult for Ted Turner to carry out his plan to acquire CBS for $4.5 billion in stocks, bonds and notes. The legislation, which would change state laws governing corporate takeovers, has a good chance of being passed in the Senate, lawmakers said.

IBM gained 1/2 to 123%. Cray Research advanced another 1% to 84% after jumping 2% Thursday. Motorola eased ¼ to 34%. Digital Equipment lost 14 to 93%.

U.S. Nearing the Brink Of Foreign-Trade Disaster

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service

EW YORK — What can be done about the yawning United States trade deficit, which referred a record $123 billion last year and is rising still ligher this year? Under mounting pressure from a hot of industries, ranging from autos and steel to textiles, electrosics and lumber that have seen their markets and jobs shrink, Congress has been urging the administration to adopt a more agressive made policy.

The administration has been trying to hold the ine against protectionist pressures. On the whole, the administration has given relatively little ground thus far, but the mod n Congress appears to be swinging toward protectionism This week, a leading congressional trade expert, Representative Don Bonker of Washington, emerged from a meeting of congressmen with White House officials to discuss legislation to protect the lumber industry and declared:

The president doesn't care about trade." This was obviously an overstatement. Neverthese Mr. Bon-ker, like many congressmen, is critical of the administration for its failure to develop a more hard-hitting trade picy. They believe that time is running out for administration scon. Some expect Congress to pass an outright protectionist would impose a surtax on all imports.

Impose a surtax on an imports.

The trade policy issue is often seen as a battle been free-traders and protectionists. But, in the view of a grown number of economists, this is a simplistic way to see the issue some are now making the point that the trade issue breaks downto a long list of problems, which vary from industry to industry affect NOTHER major issue is in the area of high techngy and intellectual property. Should a pioneering counlike the United States not have a better way of proting its achievements in technology and its new knowledge? Itannot, will this not kill off technological progress before it tes into existence? New efforts are likely to be forthcoming in thalm of protecting nations from losing their technological advages.

Mexico Devalues Peso 33%

Official Rate Is Set Afloat

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatche

MEXICO CITY — The Mexican government effectively devalued the peso Friday by 33 percent by raising its official exchange rate to compete with private exchange houses that give American tourists more than 300 pesos for their dollars.

Analysts said the government which did not want to announce a peso devaluation before its July 7 elections, was quietly acknowledg-ing the black market in pesos and letting its state banks enter the free market instead of trading the Mexi-can currency at an official ex-

"It's a clever way to regain con-trol of the exchange market with-out having to announce a devaluation," one analyst said.

Private traders had been buying dollars at up to 310 pesos, and selling them for some 325 pesos. Until Friday, banks, which are all government-owned, were required to operate at the standard rate, which this week was at roughly 245 pesos to the dollar.

Bank officials, after a meeting Thursday, decided to open trading Friday at the uncontrolled rate offered by the private exchange houses, which is some 33 percent higher than the figure the banks were forced to follow.

The move was seen as an attempt to stop customers from taking undue advantage of the lower, controlled bank rates. American tourists typically sold their currency at the free rate, while Mexicans drained dollars out of the state-run banks at the controlled rate.

The decision included the abolishment of exchange houses inside the Mexico City International Air-port where, previously, anyone with a plane ticket could buy dollars at well below the uncontrolled private rate, according to one re-

Analysts said the devaluation was forced in part by Mexico's efforts to make payments on its for-eign debt, now at $97.5 billion, and by the reduction last week of heavy oil prices for export, which will cost Mexico $520 million a year.

The peso has undergone two major devaluations in the past three more difficult for Ted Turner to stock to get control of a company, are 100 centavos to a peso. In Laredo, Texas, International

Bank of Commerce was buying pesos Thursday at 320 to the dollar, while Texas Commerce Bank in McAllen, had an exchange rate of 317 to one.

Merged Firm Struggles to Gain Upscale Identity

By James Stemgold ew York Times Service NEW YORK --- When Shearon Lehman Brothers Inc. moves later this year into its newly con-structed lower Manhattan headquarters, two stalwart traditions of the old Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb culture will go with it: the elegant partners' dining room and the silver boxes with the unlimited free cigars that Lehman partners have enjoyed for years.

Japan Reports Another Large Trade Surplus

TOKYO — Another large monthly trade surplus was an-nounced by Japan on Friday as officials put the finishing touches on a package of measures to try to contain growth.

The Finance Ministry said that Japan sold the rest of the world $4.28 billion more in goods than it bought in May, a huge jump from the $2.99-billion trade surplus in May last year.

Exports in the month rose to $14,23 billion from $14.09 billion a year earlier, but lower oil prices helped push imports down to $9.95 billion from $11.10 billion.

The latest ligure brought Japan's trade surplus for the first five months of the year to $17.29 bil-lion, almost 20 percent higher than in the same period in 1984.

Japan's export successes and a perception that its market is not completely open to imports has triggered widespread complaints from the United States, Europe and its Asian neighbors.

Many countries are preparing measures to curtail the flow of Jap-anese goods and preserve jobs in industries at home that cannot compete with Japanese products. To counter such moves, Japan is assembling an "Action Program" designed to increase imports to bring trade more into balance. Government officials said details would be announced by the end of July. On Thursday, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone promised to take action to simplify customs procedures for goods entering Ja-pan. He has already pledged to cut or end tariffs on 1,800 items and said he hoped to announce measures to strengthen the yen, making Japan's goods more expensive

Japan's current-account balance-of-payments surplus, which takes non-merchandise earnings such as services into account, also expanded in May, from $1.99 billion in May 1984 to $3.58 billion. ■ Trade Talks End in Tokyo

Japan and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations ended two days of trade talks in Tokyo Friday with a call for "renewed and determined efforts" to strengthen a free-trade system, United Press International reported.

from 2.5 percent in May.

The surplus in the current account, measuring cash transfers and trade in services and goods, rose to 5.9 billion DM ($1.93 billion) from 3.5 billion a year earlier. The April surplus was revised upward to 3.9 billion DM from the original estimate of 3.7 billion DM.

New York Traders Push Dollar Down

United Press International

NEW YORK -A relatively weak economic showing in the leading U.S. indicators sent the dollar down Friday against major currencies.

"Expectations about a rebounding U.S economy now seem premature, and the dollar was hit all round," a London dealer said. The index of leading indicators, designed to predict economic activity in the months ahead, rose 0.7 percent in May, a much smaller rise than the market expected. The pound benefited most from the dollar's weakness. The currency rose to $1.3090 in New York from $1.2955. Other late New York prices, with comparable Thursday rates, included: 3.0355 West German Deutsche marks, down from 3.0510; 2.5400 Swiss francs, down

Enserch Plans To Reduce Assets

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Enserch Corp., affected by falling oil and gas prices, has announced that it will write down its assets by about $225 million before laxes in the second quarter.

The company said Thursday that the write-down, to about $400 million, would be partly offset by an $85-million, after tax gain from the public sale of about 15 percent of Enserch Exploration Partners Ltd., a limited partnership formed in April Some analysts believed the write-down would result in a second-quarter loss for the Dallas-based company. Enserch earned $14.8 million, or 16 cents a share, in the second quarter of 1984. The company declined to comment on this year's second quarter.

Chambourcy employs 1,700 people, and Unilever's French units

The agreement is subject to gov-

mment approval. The merger was prompted by pressures on profit margins, a Unil ever spokesman in London said. Recent cost-cutting measures were not enough to secure long-term profitability and "a structural solution was therefore necessary,

GM bought Electronic Data Systems for $2.6 billion, and IBM purchased that 77 percent of Rolm, a telecommunications manufacturer that it did not already own, for $1.3

This year, GM is seeking Hughes, and IBM is allying itself with MCI Communications Corp. in an agreement to buy up to 30 percent of the stock of the longdistance telephone company.

Truly we are not just talking about merger for merger's sake, said Alfred Rappaport, a mergers expert at Northwestern University. These are parts of strategies for transfer of technology and productivity. The motivation is quite clear. Mr. Olenzak, the Sun Co. planner, said of GM's move: "They are designing a corporation for the

At RCA Corp., there was elation recently over the agreement to sell the Hertz car-rental business, which had been put on the block several years ago when it no longer seemed to fit with RCA's businesses. UAL Inc., the owner of United Airlines, saw Hertz as a fit, however, and agreed to buy it last week for $587.5 million.

Gulf & Western Industries and Wickes Cos. found a different kind of fit. As the big conglomerate pursued its divestment strategy, it was eager to sell its consumer and industrial groups. Wickes was willing to buy them for $1 billion.

AT&T Wins Computer Contract

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ameri can Telephone & Telegraph Co., which entered the crowder computer field only last year has won a major contract from the National Security Agency that ultimately could be worth as much as $946 million.

Under the contract, confirmed Friday by the Defense Department, the giant commu-nications organization would provide as many as 250 of its new 3B line of super minicom-puters to the NSA, the largest and most secret of the nation's intelligence agencies. Neither AT&T nor the security agency would disclose how the new computers would be used. An agency spokesman, Mike Levin, would say only that the machines were for a "new purpose" and would involve "many units, spread out over a number of places."

The agency recently was assigned responsibility for com-puter security within the gov-

AT&T said it would get the full $946 million only if the agency exercises all the options in the contract, which extends through 1988. In winning the job, AT&T beat out a host of major computer makers, in-cluding International Business Machines Corp., Gould Inc. and Digital Equipment Corp.

"This is a very large procurement which we worked very hard on for more than a year, said Warren Corgan, the vice president in charge of AT&T's Federal Systems Division.

THE Latino poet is supposed to have — is almost required to have — a place in politics, a role in diplomacy, a stake in the hurly-burly of temporal events. No contemporary Latino poet has lived the political part more knowingly or independently than Octavio Paz, the Mexican-born septuagenarian who fuses the study of language, history, government and art in a world view free of superpower prejudices or theogratic certainties.

Here are essays of the immediate, some of them written for Spanish-language newspapers, some of them new, all of them celebrating human freedom as opposed to manufactured ideology. "Ideology." Paz writes, "converts ideas into masks: They hide the person who wears them, and at the same time they keep him from seeing reality."

He offers aid, but little comfort, to the United States. He offers explanation, but no support, for and Latin American intellectuals attempt to equate the policy of the United States with that of the Soviet Union, as though they were twin monsters. Hypocrisy, naïvetè or cynicism? It seems to me that what is monstrous is the comparison itself. The errors, the failures and the sins of the United States are enormous, and I am not trying to absolve that nation." Paz goes on to criticize the United States, Western democracies and Japan for incoherent policies, for blindness to the social problems in less developed nations and for being the accomplices of and its vassal countries."

Solution to Last Week's Puzzle

THEBEAM FATHA PAUPER

But the U.S. approach to foreign affairs is too often the posture of empire, with all the oppressions and power plays associated with empire. Paz sees the contadora group of nations — Panama, Colombia. Venezuela and Mexico — as the best brokers for peace in Central America.

100 Considerably

The trouble with Mexico, he suggests, is proximity to the United States, sometimes aping and sometimes loathing the big neighbor with the fancier house and larger yard. The passion of our intellectuals for U.S. civilization ranges from love to bitter rancor, from adoration to horror," Paz writes. While Mexico embraced U.S. notions of freedom and modernity. Mexico arrived at that embrace from a wholly different history: "Between puritanism, democracy and capitalism there was not opposition but affinity; the past and future of the United States are reflected without contradiction in these three words. Between republican ideology and the Catholic world of the Mexican viceroyalty, a mosaic of pre-Columbian survivals and Baroque forms, there was a sharp break: Mexico denied its past."

Paz discusses Protestantism as a positive force for a young United States, as a religion without the hierarchy and immutability of a church assuming universal allegiance. He compares the relative in-flexibility of Catholicism with the almost absolute inflexibility of Marxism as a kind of kinship between sworn enemies. The certainty and the pseudoscience of Marxism, he writes, has a logical appeal for revolutionaries who grew up in a Catholic cul-

The magnificence of these essays is fearlessness, intelligence, literary grace and a willingness to make the opposite seem apposite and the paradoxical appear predictable. Paz knows his neighbors' histories, and he knows the global stories in Asia, Africa and Europe. The weakness here, if lack of a political formula is in fact a weakness, is the absence of Paz formula is in fact a weakness, is the absence of Paz — translate peace — proposals to cure what alls humanity. The poet's solution, logically, is language and discussion: "Dialogue keeps us from denying ourselves and from denying the humanity of the adversary." The trouble with that solution is the presumption that both sides of a struggle want to talk. Look at Geneva, right now. Listen for dialogue and hear vilification instead.

Marxist-Leninist regimes: "Not a few European brutal dictatorships.

"All this having been said, however," he continues, "it must be added that the capitalist democracies have preserved fundamental freedoms within their own borders. On the other hand, ideological war abroad and totalitarian despotism at home are the two constituent features of the Soviet regime

The trouble with the United States, he suggests, is a two-faced approach to the world — one inside expression for its citizens, another outside appearance in dealing with other nations. The United States is, internally, a democracy, and its people

Hinault Wins Tour Prologue

Bretons Cheer Favorite Son as France's Big Race Begins

By Samuel Abt

PLUMELEC. France - Sixty thousand Bretons turned out Friday to cheer Bernard Hinault, the region's favorite son each summer. He did not disappoint them. Setting off next to last in the 180-man prologue to the 72d Tour de France bicycle road race, Hin-ault overtook much of the field that, in 11/2-minute intervals, had left one-by-one before him. He won

A mighty cheer went up, sireus blared and the black and white flag of Brittany flew as Hinault crossed the finish line. His time for the 6.8kilometer (just over 4-mile) race was 8 minutes 47.4 seconds.

The next best time, 8:51.59, was turned in nearly balf an hour earlier by Eric Vanderaerden of the Pana-sonic team. "I can do that too," Hinault remembered thinking as he started off in pursuit of his fifth victory in the Tour de France.

Third in the prologue to the 4,000-kilometer tour was Stephen Roche of the Redoute team, with Phil Anderson of Panasonic fourth and Greg LeMond of Hinault's La Vie Claire team finishing fifth. All were timed in more than nine min-

"The public gave me a lot of joy," Hinault said of the throngs of spectators along the course. "This support really shows their interest in bicycling."

Hinault, 30, was being modest.

OSLO (AP) — Olympic champion Said Aouita of Morocco ran the world's second fastest 5,000-meter race and world champion Steve Cram of Great Britain recorded the third fastest 1,500 meters on Bislett

Stadium's new super-fast synthetic track Thursday night.

Aouita registered 13:04.52 and Cram turned in a 3:31.34 in outclassing their opposition in the international Oslo Games track and field meet. Despite running in the international Oslo Games track and field meet.

Despite running in thunder and rain, Aouita bettered his previous personal best of 13:04.78; the world record of 13:00.42 was set by David Moorcroft of Great Britain on July 7, 1982, in Bislett Stadium.

Cram defeated Steve Scott of the United States and a dozen other top states are a summing in only 0.57 seconds off fellow Briton Steve Overt's world record set in 1983. Bruce Bickford of the United States was runner-up behind Aouita.

Sutton, Sander Lead in U.S. Golf

MEMPHIS, Tennessee (UPI) - Hal Sutton, winner of more than $1 million in barely 31/2 years on the U.S. pro golf tour, and Bill Sander, who is last on this year's money list, each shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday to share the first-round lead in the Memphis Classic.

David Ogrin was one stroke back, John Mahaffey and George Burns

Sutton got three of his seven birdies in a four-hole span after a 90minute electrical storm delay. Sander, who had not broken par previously this year while winning only $712, was in the last threesome to finish and aught Sutton with a birdie on the final hole.

Belgian Grand Prix Fined, Date Set

PARIS (AP) — The executive committee of the International Auto Sport Federation levied a fine of $10,000 Thursday against the organizers of the Belgian Grand Prix and rescheduled the race for Sept. 15. The race was postponed June 2 because of poor track conditions at the Spa-

In New York, it was announced that plans to hold a Grand Prix race in a Queens park in September have been canceled because the site could not be prepared in time.

For the Record

Alan Wiggins, the San Diego Padres' suspended second baseman, was officially traded to the Baltimore Orioles for minor league relief pitcher Roy Lee Jackson and a player to be named later. Wiggins has been ned to the Class AAA team in Rochester, New York, but is expected to join the Orioles next week.

George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, has been denied an owner's license to race horses at the new Canterbury Downs race track in Minnesota because he made illegal political contributions to former president Richard Nixon.

home in the north of Brittany to its southern coast, he has been deluged with affection. Cheered everywhere and pursued by autograph seekers, the sometimes prickly star has been patient and gracious.

Brittany is strong bicycling country but does not often entertain the world's most famous race because its flat terrain does not allow for varied competition. Bre-tons are fond of complaining that the Tour de France should add a phrase in parentheses, except for Brittany, but this year the mori-bund area won the right to be host.

The result is three days of racing through a host of cities and towns before the riders begin rolling east-ward on a long clockwise circuit that ends July 21 in Paris. Hinault is the strong favorite to be wearing the overall leader's yellow jersey then and equal the record of five tour victories held by Eddy Merckx and Jacques Anquetil. Merckx dominated the field in the 1970s since he first started in the Tour de France in 1978. He won that year and in 1979, 1981 and 1982. Ten-dinitis in his left knee forced him to withdraw while he was leading the 1980 tour and the same ailment kept him out of the 1983 race.

After an operation, he returned last year to finish second to Laurent Fignon, who himself was kept out of this year's race by surgery for tendinitis in his left Achilles ten-

Fignon, 24. was a spectator Friday afternoon in Plumelec, a vil-lage comprised of a handful of stores, a church and a circuit of well-kept roads that is often used for bicycle races, including last year's French national championship. As he said beforehand, Hinault knows the course well.

Mostly he knows the people and their feeling for him. Sporting a broad, confident grin, he mounted the victor's podium and was presented with an armful of flowers, then both cheeks twice by a beauty queen and next the yellow jersey. that had just arrived in the embrace of a parachutist. How they did cheer when Hinault launched the flowers into the crowd.

Hinault continued to be the best of sports as he was deluged with other facets of the tour's commercial ballyhoo: a plush lion symbolizing a banking sponsor, a small flag celebrating a builder of vaca-tion bomes and, finally, a can of Coca-Cola. He took a quick sip of the soft drink before thrusting it to an official.

Coca-Cola, this year, has replaced Perrier as the official drink of the Tour de France, ending rather controversially 52 years of sponrace's internationalization, but to others it is yet another example of American cultural imperialism

Wicked souls insist the change was made to encourage interest in the race in the United States since, according to this theory, Coca-Cola will sponsor a weekly series of U.S. television programs about the race. Officials of Columbia Broadcasting System, which is filming the programs, deny this. In any case the Tour de France not a lot you can do when you feel

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe and Martina Nav-ratilova won their second-round matches in straight sets Friday and stayed on course to retain their men's and women's singles titles at the Wimbledon tennis champion-

Chris Evert Lloyd, the co-top seed with Navratilova in the women's singles, also reached the third round and kept alive her hopes of winning the Grand Slam -consecutive victories at the world's four major tournaments.

McEnroe overcame a cautious start before beating Nigeria's top player, Nduka Odizor, 7-6 (7-1), 6-1, 7-6 (7-1). Navratilova overpowered Anne Minter of Australia, 6-4, 6-1, and Evert took just under an hour to spoil the 21st birthday of fellow American Susan Mascarin. 6-3, 6-0, Carling Bassett of Canada, the women's No. 13 seed, was upset by Rene Uys of South Africa, 0-6, 7-6 (14-12), 6-3.

Men's seeds joining McEnroe in the third round included Jimmy Connors, Johan Kriek and Tim Mayotte of the United States, Yannick Noah of France and Stefan Edberg and Anders Jarryd of Swe-

The Wimbledon press corps adored it. Shocked Wimbledon authorities banned it. But one thing was certain: White's skin-tight leotard was the biggest talking point around the staid All England Club on Friday. White, 23, appeared on court Thursday wearing the white nylon outfit, complete with leg warmers and headband. The crowd that packed around No. 2 court cheered and whistled, and the photographers snapped away busily.

But when the match was halted due to darkness, tournament officials told White not to appear again in the tight-fitting body suit when she returned to the court Friday. For the completion of her match, White wore a conventional white top and matching skirt. "I did not want to cause problems or make people here spill their strawberries and cream," she joked after her 6-3, 6-7, 6-3 defeat.

She said wore the body suit because of the chilly weather. And, because of its sheerness, "I had on actually at least two body suits. So I

PITTSBURGH - You have to hand it to Jeff Reardon, and the Montreal Expos usually do near the end of a game.

"It makes it easy for me, knowing Jeff's in the bullpen," the Expos' long reliever, Tim Burke, said after Thursday night's 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. "I don't have to worry about getting into trouble because he's there. My job is to get it to the ninth inning so he can come in and terminate."

As usually has been the case all season, Burke provided strong relief in the late innings and Reardon nailed down the victory in the ninth for his major league-leading 22nd save. Nicknamed "The Terminstor," Reardon has blown only one lead in 31 appearances this season, The Pirates' Joe Orsulak, who went 4-for-4, tripled and scored on Johnny Ray's single before Jason

Pondering the Value of a Human Life

By William R. Greet

Vew York Times Service

YEW YORK — When a construction crane fell on Brigitte Gerney last month as she walked along Manhattan's Third Avenue, pinning her for six hours, the city leaped into action. Hundreds of police officers rerouted traffic throughout the Upper East Side. Two cranes were brought from other boroughs to lift the one that had fallen. Doctors from Bellevue Hospital set up a mobile hospital at the construction site. Emergency Service rescue workers risked their lives to save hers. Once she was freed, police halted traffic for 30 blocks to speed her trip to the emergency room.

No city official questioned how much the rescue effort cost, or whether saving Gerney's life was worth the price. "There's no point where you say that's too expensive," said Lieutenant Thomas Fahey, speaking for the New York City Police Department.

Yet putting a price tag on hu-man life is common among life insurance companies, airlines. courts, industries and agencies. The U.S. government routinely calculates the value of a life, having been required to do so by law: Executive Order 12291, issued by President Ronald Reagan in February 1981. Ordinary citizens make much the same determination, albeit unconsciously, when they choose small cars over large ones, take jobs hundreds of feet below ground for nigher pay, or buy inexpensive houses in a flood

The fact that there are these prices put on human life, and the processes for making such valuations and the ways in which the results are used, raise questions about the society: Is this necessary? What are the etnical and moral considerations? Given the answers, where does human life stand in society's scheme of things?

People have been calculating the worth of their lives and the lives of others for as long as archaeologists, anthropologists and historians can document human existence,

"It may be thought to be an aberration of our own institutional values, but it's not at all unique in the course of humankind." said Kenneth Korey, an anthropologist at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire. "In tribal and band societies, for example, we find in-demnification for the loss of a life that involves property transfers. How else can those groups set straight the fabric of the society when it is distressed by the disorder of a murder? The Aztecs created an elaborate system of compensation for injuries and deaths; so did the Code of Hammurabi of ancient Babylonia. In ancient and medieval law, a composition, or sum of money, was paid by a guilty party to satisfy the family of the person he injured or killed. In Old English, "wergild," meaning "man's price," referred to the amount paid to the king, who had lost a subject: to the lord of the manor. who had lost a vassal; and to the family of the deceased.

But there is a fundamental difference, many social scientists say, between calculating the value of a life to compensate for its loss, and determining whether it is worth saving, a practice growing more common.

"We cannot argue that in our society human life has gained in value or that we cherish life more than primitive people did," said Robert Zeitlin, an archaeologist at Brandeis University in Waltham, Massachusetts, "I think, looking back at our society thousands of years from now, people will regard some of the things we do with absolute horror, the fact that we knowingly allow people to die from environmental hazards, for example."

Some philosophers say the val-ue of human life is infinite or incalculable. "Individual human beings are utterly irreplaceable," said Daniel Callahan, director of the Hastings Center, a nonprofit research and educational organization devoted to ethical issues in medicine and biology.

However, insurance agents, economists, legal experts, scientists and agency administrators assign life values ranging from a few dollars to many millions of dollars, depending on the formulas used.

One way of figuring value is to break down the body into chemical elements — 5 pounds of calcium, 11/2 pounds of phosphorus, 9 ounces of potassium. 6 ounces of sulfur, 6 ounces of sodium, a little more than I ounce of magnesium and less than an ounce each of iron, copper and iodine. Harry Monsen, an anatomy professor at the University of Illinois Medical School in Chicago, said that, on that basis, a human life is worth $8.37, up $1.09 in six years because of inflation.

Another approach is to look at Agency chooses a number be-the going price of contract mur-der. Andreas Santiago Hernan-dez, 22, recently told the Los Angeles Police Department that he was paid $5,000 to kill Lorraine Keiler, the 67-year-old widow of a San Fernando Valley executive.

The life-insurance industry determines what people would have earned had they lived. "What is the economic value of an individ-ual?" said Robert Waldron, director of the New York office of the American Council of Life Insurance. "It's their earning power over the course of their working life. It's unsentimental but it's fairly straightforward." Lee S. Kreindler, a lawyer who since 1952 has been representing the victims of airplane crashes and their families, says his formula is specified by law. But the law varies from state to state. In Georgia for example, people are worth what they would have earned, while in New York they are worth what they would have contributed to their family. "A 35-year-old man, killed in a crash, is unmarried but was making a great amount of money," Kreindler said. "That's a small case in New York, but a huge case in Georgia. Kreindler said crash victims' families can expect to recover $300,000 to $500,000, with a few cases in the millions. Insurance experts say that in the case of the Air-India jetliner that went down Sunday, many passenger claims against the airline would be limited to a maximum of $100,000 under the Montreal Convention, an international treaty, but that there was no limitation in claims against the aircraft's manufactur-

Then there are federal government formulas. Executive Order 12291 requires that, unless Congress forbids it, "regulatory action shall not be undertaken unless the potential benefits to society from the regulation outweigh the potential costs to soci-tween $400,000 and $7 million -the choice, agency officials say, is arbitrary — with the average be-ing "around $1 million or $2 mil-lion," according to John M. Campbell, the deputy assistant administrator for policy. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration uses a scale of $2 million to $5 million.

Federal officials argue that these computations make economic sense: It helps them decide which regulations will protect the most people for the least amount of money. "We haven't got infi-nite resources," said Edwin L. Dale Ir., a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget.
"If it would cost an industry $800 million of remedial action to save one life, then it would only take 1,000 lives before they would use one-fifth of the GNP." W. Kip Viscusi, an economist at Duke University in North Carolina who directed the Council on Wage and Price Stability in the Carter administration, supports the government's use of the "willingness to pay" approach: An economist looks at how much money employees must be paid to accept a certain level of risk in their jobs; the economist can then calculate the value employees place on their lives. If, for example, a certain job carries a fatality risk of one in every 10,000 workers in a year and workers are willing to face that risk for $300 in additional pay, then that group values one of its members' lives at $300 times 10,000 workers, or $3 Viscusi figures that the average blue-collar worker puts a $3-million to $3.5-million price tag on a life. Workers in high-risk indus-tries such as mining and oil-rig drilling, where the death risk is I in 1,000, value life at about $600,000, he said, and white-collar workers, who are much less willing to accept the risk of fatalities in their relatively safe jobs. price it at $7 million to $10 mil-

whether to perform such calculations, but how the answers are used. "The alternative," he said, is to pull values out of the air and not make the public aware of what the trade-off is between money and risk on the job." He added: "We always have to get back to the fundamental trade-off between money and risk, because we don't have enough money to eliminate all the risks."

Court Overturns Award To Ex-Anchoricoman

A federal appeals court in Kansas City, Missouri, overturned on Friday a jury award of $325,000 to Christine Craft, the former TV anchorwoman who contended she was demoted because her bosses did not like her age or locks. The court also ruled in favor of Metromedia Inc. on Craft's allegations of sex discrimination and equal-pay violations. Dennis Egan, one of Craft's lawyers, said he would file a motion for a rehearing with the appeals court and failing that might go to the U.S. Supreme Court Craft, now 40, was removed as anchorwoman in August 1981. She sued Metromedia, saying the news director told her that research indicated viewers found her "too old, too unattractive and not defer-ential enough to men. The news director denied having made such a remark, In 1983, a U.S. District Court jury awarded Craft $500,000. The amount was lowered in a second trial to $325,000.
